

UC DAVIS History Century
HSS Contractor for Writing The Framework Standards

Hi Nancy,

Here is the Pacific Education Bill wording. The expectation for the upcoming draft is the innovation: the story starts with the landscape natural history, and you add the Pacific section to the framework for the common core inquiry of "What is the meaning of history" for adolescent teens at risk to ignorance of losing our history, by exploring the timeline of 19th Century US expansion from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Have you studied the program: Making of North America?

You will be applauded and energize enthusiasm for this Vision to transform the HSS standards into the resource for creativity to expand basic knowledge with the essential foundation, resulting in the construction of learning for preparedness as the future reality.

You understand what I mean. We only get this opportunity once in our lives to make this positive difference for fulfilling youth learning potential.

I am talking with people that if you need more time and money, then we can move forward with appreciation and collaborative teamwork.

The inclusion of the accurate science of the Pacific connects the physical to the social sciences. It reveals the thinking of Humboldt's enlightenment, and the ideals of Jefferson for the West as the emergence - like the teens with are educating - of the US cultural identity framed by the US Constitution. At the sametime, the Transatlantic Industrial Revolution at Boston is expanding the whaling and US maritime trade around the horn to Peru and Hawaii as the future on the Pacific.

The YEAR OF DECISION 1846 is a gigantic story of Polk's policies - continued by Lincoln - especially for teachers in classrooms with over 60% students being first generation and USA Proud - that shares the OREGON-MEXICO histories on the Pacific, with the key building of the Bale Mill financed by Thomas O. Larking for Overland Anglo-American pioneer settlers.

This inclusion of the STEVENSON REGIMENT in 1846 is a crucial story for explain how the military in history plays a key role for the building the modern state. All the talent that won the Civil War for Lincoln came from the Army of the Pacific? Are you surprised that it took a drunk, a pimp, and a madman to win.... not a West Point academic.

We have a wonderful US history to unfold and examine - of success and failures - especially to show the anti-foreignism in the geography locations with the distinct waves of emigrants - resulting in the "Whitening of America" from bankers, investors, and shipping companies.

Again, I am here to deliver the measurable outcome that will raise California's ranking to no. 1 for having the courage to start the story with the natural landscape and the human relationships the fertile soil (not raced based - but accurate science of cultural athro in history.) I can see myself teaching this class.

Kind regards,
